1. Within the vast primary zone, starting from the first day of larval activity, mosquitoes lay several generations of eggs. The first generation of eggs is laid on the 1st day of larval activity, the second on the 2nd day, the third on the 3rd day, and so on. The number of eggs laid by a female mosquito is 100-200. The eggs are laid in the water, and the larvae hatch after 2-3 days. The larvae grow up and pupate, and the pupae hatch after 5-7 days. The adults emerge from the pupae and lay eggs again. This cycle repeats itself several times during the life of a mosquito.

5. Product label design (visual appeal and legibility) will be covered by the following:
